CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

1.1. Background of Research

Along with the time, globalization has considerable influence in our lives such as in the business world. This causes the increasing competition that occurs in the business and requires companies to have a proper strategy, in order to survive and compete in the global world. The strategy is not only aimed at the company's products, but also to the company's internal organization which is determined by the organization itself and the people in it. Organizational performance can be increased by at least 10% by enhancing psychological capital (Memari et al., 2013).

Within the company, the employees and the company are two things that cannot be separated. Employees including the manager therein, play a major role in running the company's life and active actors of every organization's activities. Therefore, the establishment of a good organizational behavior is needed in the enterprise to gain knowledge to improve organizational effectiveness in organizational behavior where we can observe the influence of the behavior of individuals, groups and behavior in the organizational structure. Research done by Memari et al. (2013) proved that one of the factors that affected the efficiency of organizations was related to psychological issues which led to the increase in qualitative and quantitative efficiency of the organizations in different ways, e.g. improving relations, identifying personnel’s mentality, individuals’ personality and habits, as well as provisions for preventing deficiencies, absenteeism, work slowness, waste of workforce, distresses, and disorder.

Not only from the leadership style that can affect the level of employee performance, but it can be seen from the aspect of organizational communication and employee satisfaction which has the three aspects of the organizational behavior and performance levels of employees that was the variable in this research. Managers will spend more than 75 percent of his activity time to implement some of the communication techniques. Evidence showed that internal communication has high extreme importance. A research conducted by Marino and Faktol (1988) in Farahbod (2013) showed that there was positive relationship between the amount of time spent on communication and important activities such as actions leading to job satisfaction. The result of these findings showed that many organizations spent significant human and financial resources to develop effective internal communication systems and facilitate communication techniques and also strengthen the staff’s ideal information at all levels of organizational. According to Kamasak (2008), communication influence as a mediator or a moderator was also tested in the model with the expectation that a positive communication climate would increase the level of job satisfaction and strengthen the perception of employees’ external image of the organization.

Achieving a high level of employee performance is considered the common goal for many organizations. According to Yvonne (2014), employee’s satisfaction is the gateway to the success of an organization. This is because employees who exhibit a higher level of satisfaction tend to put more effort in their jobs that may then lead to better job performance. Hence, for an organization to achieve a higher level of performance, a satisfying working context is required. An organization will not work without the contribution from the employees as the employees could lead the organization to a better position in the highly competitive market nowadays. Usually employees who are able to perform better (high performers) will have higher priority to be hired compared to those of low performers. This is because organizational successfulness is usually based on the organizational performance which is largely depend on the performance of every single employee in the company.
Wright et al. (2007) in Yvonne (2014) determined the relation between job satisfaction and job performance and the role of Positive Well-Being (PWB) employee as a moderator in this relation. Research was conducted on 109 managers employed by the customer services organization at the West Coast of the United States. Job satisfaction of the participants was measured in terms of the degree of satisfaction with work itself, co-workers and also supervision while the indicator for job performance was goal emphasis and the job performance of each participant was evaluated by their immediate manager. Research concluded that job satisfaction was correlated with job performance whereby all the three dimensions of job satisfaction were correlated with performance. Other than that, they also found that PWB was associated with performance ratings and PWB moderated the relation between job satisfaction and job performance. It means that performance was at its highest level when employees reported high scores on PWB and job satisfaction.

Arzi (2014) explained that one of the most important organizational resources is human resource of organization. The human resource in different organizational levels can be employed and each of them requires its own specified planning. Both top managers and middle managers and also workforce in lower organizational levels are all considered as human resource. Therefore, organizations attempt to increase job satisfaction in different organizational levels according to their expectations in order to increase organizational performance. Leadership is known as one of the important aspects of job satisfaction from employees. It can fully impact the dedication and motivation of employees. Having distinct leadership style is a key element that impacts employee’s job satisfaction which leads to organizational success. Additionally, job satisfaction is a critical and important outcome of having an effective leadership in an organization. Rizi (2013) also stated that Leadership styles have a significant influence upon operational efficiency, especially if we observe them in a contingency context. Organizations are social systems where human resources are the most important factors for effectiveness and efficiency. Organizations need effective managers and employees to achieve their objectives. Organizations cannot succeed without their personnel efforts and commitment. Job satisfaction is critical to retain and attract well qualified personnel. This is especially an issue in medical institutions such as hospitals where specialist training and retention are highly important for employee. Job satisfaction is an attitude that people have about their jobs and the organizations in which they perform these jobs. Methodologically, we can define job satisfaction as an employee’s affective reaction to a job, based on a comparison between actual outcomes and desired outcomes. Job satisfaction is generally recognized as a multifaceted construct that includes employee feelings about a variety of both intrinsic and extrinsic job elements. It encompasses specific aspects of satisfaction related to pay, benefits, promotion, work conditions, supervision, organizational practices and relationships with co-workers.

This research explained the relationship among variables by doing research on Kalimilk in Yogyakarta. Due to the low amount of milk consumption in Indonesia, Kalimilk came with a mission to change Indonesian people’s healthy habit to be accustomed to drink milk. By the end of 2010, after the eruption of Mount Merapi, numerous milk farmers struggled to sell their fresh cow milk. As one of its visions to Empower Milk Farmer in Indonesia, therefore, Kalimilk cooperates with them to produce the best fresh milk in Indonesia. Since its first inception, on December 31, 2010, Kalimilk’s #TKP 1 was the first modern fresh milk store in Jogjakarta with many variants. Therefore, the title of this research is “THE INFLUENCE OF LEADERSHIP STYLE AND ORGANIZATIONAL COMMUNICATION TOWARD THE EMPLOYEE PERFORMANCE IN KALIMILK YOGYAKARTA AND JOB SATISFACTION AS THE INTERVENING VARIABLE”.
