ABSTRACT

Research on conformity and aggressive behavior is important to do because the condition of students regarding aggressive behavior should be minimized. This study aims to determine the relationship between conformity and aggressive behavior. The research involved 245 students in one of the junior high schools (SMP) in the city of Klaten. This research is a correlational quantitative research. Data collection used a questionnaire instrument method composed of a Likert scale which was distributed directly to students in one of the junior high schools (SMP) in the city of Klaten. Research conducted using a scale of conformity and aggressive behavior. The hypothesis in this study is that there is a positive relationship between conformity and aggressive behavior in individuals. To answer the hypothetical questions in this study, data analysis was performed using Statistical Product and Service Solutions (SPSS) statistical software. The results showed that there was a positive relationship between conformity and aggressive behavior ($r=0.000$ and $P=0.402$).
